

Ex parte Aldridge

While direct contempt must occur in the presence of the court, the wording “in the presence of the court” does not necessarily mean in the immediate presence of the court. The court is present whenever any of its constituent parts (including the judge, the courtroom, the jury, and the jury room) are engaged in the prosecution or the business of the court.