

Naff v. State

A person swearing to a complaint in municipal court may do so based on information contained in the citation. Although the prosecutor's secretary swore to the complaint and did not have firsthand knowledge of the events, there is no such requirement that the person swearing do so on firsthand knowledge, and she did so based upon information contained in the citation written by the police officer.

Naff also states that driving an automobile is a privilege and not a right.